Daniel Möckli is a Senior Researcher at the Center for Security Studies, ETH Zurich, Switzerland. He specializes in European foreign and security policy since 1945, transatlantic relations and the Middle East, and Swiss foreign and security policy.

Recent publications include European Foreign Policy during the Cold War (I.B. Tauris), European-American Relations and the Middle East: From Suez to Iraq (Routledge, with Victor Mauer), and "Switzerland and the United Nations: The Long Road to Membership."

Daniel studied History, International Relations, and English Literature. He received his B.A. from the University of Kent at Canterbury and his M.A. (Lizentiat) and Ph.D. from the University of Zurich.